OVERVIEW

This was an East-African birding and wildlife adventure to be remembered for many years to come; 459 species of birds were recorded, with a total of 35 species of mammals. Eleven of the latter were primates, including mountain gorilla and eastern chimpanzee. On the birding front, Green-breasted Pitta, Shoebill, and Grauer’s Broadbill were all seen extremely well.

Day 1. Entebbe

We kicked the tour off with a relaxed day spent birding around the gardens of the hotel. This allowed us to really get acquainted with some of the more common species and become acclimatized after some long flights and frustrating delays. The gardens were excellent, and we enjoyed some plain-looking species such as African Thrush, Speckled Mousebird, Northern Black Flycatcher, and Dark-capped Bulbul (which we eventually saw every single day of the trip). There were also some spectacularly colorful species around the gardens; these were Black-headed Gonolek – a firm favorite, White-browed Robin-Chat, Red-chested Sunbird, Double-toothed Barbet, Meyer’s and Grey Parrots, and the extravagant Eastern Plantain-eater. That afternoon we visited the Entebbe Botanic Gardens on the eastern side of town, overlooking Lake Victoria. The gardens are beautiful with some giant trees, and they definitely provide one with a good opportunity to do some relaxed introductory birding. We found the likes of Lizard Buzzard with red-legged sun squirrel prey, African Emerald Cuckoo, Red-bellied Paradise Flycatcher, and African Hobby hawking insects above the edge of the lake. A list of over 70 species kicked off day one and set the tone for the rest of the trip – bring it on!

Day 2. Mabamba Swamp, drive to Lake Mburo National Park

Shoebill, Mabamba Swamp

Mabamba Swamp is the well-known site near Entebbe to get good looks at the wonderfully enigmatic Shoebill. We set off in two separate boats in search of not only the prehistoric-looking Shoebill but other waterfowl as well. We did well and within the first couple of minutes notched up Long-toed Lapwing, Blue-breasted Bee-eater, Yellow-billed Duck and White-faced Whistling Duck, Malachite Kingfisher, and Hamerkop, as well as African Jacana. The Shoebill itself didn't take long at all to locate, and it was soon spotted about 50 meters from where we were. We positioned ourselves well and soon enough had great views of the bird walking through the swamp. A magical moment for any birder! We knew we had a long journey today, so after picking up Vieillot's Black Weaver, African Pied Wagtail, and Swamp Flycatcher in the parking area we set off for Lake Mburo National Park. Lake Mburo is situated within a savanna biome; we would therefore quickly add to our rapidly growing list of birds and also add some of our first big mammals. The afternoon was very enjoyable; some highlights were Blue-naped Mousebird, Red-faced Crombec, Senegal and Brown-chested Lapwings, Plain-backed Pipit, Sooty Chat, and the impressive Western Banded Snake Eagle. Mammals included olive baboon, vervet monkey, topi, defassa waterbuck, bushbuck, and plains zebra.

Day 3. Lake Mburo National Park to Kisoro

We started the morning with a quick breakfast and then made our way to the shoreline of the lake for a boat trip. The boat trip delivered the goods, and it wasn't long before we notched up the smart-looking White-backed Night Heron. Kingfishers were abundant and included Giant, Pied, and the stunning Malachite. The lakeshore included some really pristine papyrus reed habitat, which is home to a couple of interesting species. The papyrus held the likes of White-winged Swamp Warbler, Greater Swamp Warbler, Carruthers's Cisticola, and Papyrus Gonolek (which didn't show itself on the boat ride, but we did get a stunning individual later that day), as well as Little Bittern, Black Crake, Northern Brown-throated Weaver, and Swamp Flycatcher. One of the other targets on the boat trip was the sought-after African Finfoot. We spent a few minutes scanning the shoreline, and soon enough we spotted two separate African Finfoots as they worked their way along the shoreline. Other species of interest on the cruise were African Fish Eagle and Striated and Goliath Herons, as well as a marsh mongoose. After the boat trip a short drive in the park allowed us to record Bateleur, White-winged Black Tit, Long-tailed Cisticola, Red-breasted Swallow, and Grey-backed Fiscal. We then headed out and started our journey to Kisoro town, where we would stay for two nights to bird the beautiful Mgahinga Gorilla National Park area. This park borders both Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of Congo and is well known for the volcanic mountains that act as a backdrop while one is trekking for golden monkeys or mountain gorillas. In our case, however, we would begin our trek tomorrow with Ruwenzori Turaco in mind.

Day 4. Mgahinga Gorilla National Park

We took a drive from our accommodation in Kisoro to Mgahinga National Park, where we were joined by a local bird guide and ranger as well as a porter to help carry packed lunches and extra water; a fairly long day's birding lay ahead. Our main aim for the day would be to search for Albertine Rift species, including the extravagant-looking Ruwenzori Turaco. We started off near the main office and found very confiding Olive-breasted Greenbul as well as Ruwenzori Double-collared Sunbird. Mountain Yellow Warbler and Cinnamon Bracken Warbler lurked nearby, while Streaky Seedeater was perched in plain sight, feeding on a flowering bush. We were lucky enough to get amazing looks at one of the most striking small sunbirds, Regal Sunbird, which was the cause of many "oohs and aahs". Further on Kandt's Waxbills were feeding in the track, and we were alerted to the call of Doherty's Bushshrike. As expected, the bushshrike stayed fairly well concealed, but for a moment when it perched it was reasonably well exposed and provided the opportunity for brief but satisfying visuals. We ended up walking a little further towards the Rwanda/Congo border before we finally heard THE turaco. A small opening next to us helped us to get a beautiful flight visual of it as the bird came gliding by. Ruwenzori Turaco, an Albertine Rift endemic, is as beautiful in nature as it is in the field guide! Archer's Ground Robin and Strange Weaver definitely gave us the runaround, and only some members of the group managed to get decent visuals of these two species. Ruwenzori Batis was not as 'selfish' as the ground robin and showed well, both males and females. After lunch we continued our quest in search of a few others and were rewarded with species such as Augur Buzzard, White-eyed Slaty Flycatcher, Bronzy Sunbird, and Western Tinkerbird. Other enjoyable birds recorded today included White-starred Robin, Chubb's Cisticola, Abyssinian Thrush, and White-browed Crombec. We ended the day with some lovely Cinnamon-chested Bee-eaters up in some trees back in Kisoro.

Day 5. Transfer to Bwindi Impenetrable National Park – birding Ruhija

After breakfast we managed to squeeze in about fifteen minutes birding in the gardens of the hotel before we headed off towards the much-anticipated Bwindi Impenetrable National Park. Grey-capped Warblers were singing beautifully and hopping around the hedges, while Red-faced Cisticola was seen just over a nearby stream. We also added the likes of White-tailed Blue Flycatcher, Black-crowned Waxbill, and Black-headed Weaver. En route we notched up African Black Swift flying above the agriculturally-strewn mountainside. Other species that we picked up in the morning's birding session included Regal Sunbird, Red-faced Woodland Warbler, Banded Prinia, Mountain Masked Apalis, and Ruwenzori Apalis, as well as Yellow-whiskered Greenbul. Despite the cold and misty weather the afternoon birding session on a small public road near Ruhija was rather productive, producing Yellow-streaked Greenbul, Grey Cuckooshrike, Northern Puffback, Brown-crowned Tchagra, Mountain Oriole, and one of our main targets for the area, Stripe-breasted Tit. Unfortunately, the light faded early this afternoon, but a fantastic day had been had, and we could look forward to five more days in Bwindi.

Day 6. Gorilla trekking and birding Ruhija

Two members of the tour group joined one of the local mountain gorilla trekking teams this morning, and as can be seen by the photograph below, amazing sightings of a large family group were enjoyed. They were also treated to sightings of Great Blue Turaco while trekking, a huge and fascinating turaco species.

Other birding this morning was very productive. Lühder's Bushshrike showed astonishingly well, while the highlight was probably the strange Albertine Rift endemic Grauer's Warbler. A pair of these warblers was heard calling from a large tangle of vines, and with a bit of patience we managed to get great views as they moved across from tangle to tangle. Boehm's bush squirrel and Ruwenzori sun squirrel grabbed our attention away from the birds.

for a few moments as they jumped from branch to branch. Afternoon birding deeper in the forest gave sightings of Slender-billed Greenbul, Black-throated Apalis, Petit's Cuckooshrike, Grey-throated Barbet, and an interesting sighting of what were most likely Schouteden's Swifts, a species thought to be confined to the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo, but since 2014 there have been reports of largely unconfirmed sightings over Bwindi's higher-lying forest areas. A pair of Handsome Francolin feeding alongside the road ended off a very successful day in just the right manner and gave us enough time for good looks and a few pictures too.

Day 7. Mubwindi Swamp and Grauer's Broadbill

Today we set off on what we knew would be one of the more physically exhausting days of the tour, the walk to Mubwindi Swamp. The swamp area is a good four-to-five-kilometer walk away over some tricky terrain. But the walk offers some fantastic birding and of course chances at some very special Albertine Rift endemics, such as the sought after Grauer's (African Green) Broadbill and a handful of others that are improbable elsewhere. We kicked the birding off with species such as Mountain Illadopsis, Mountain Sooty Boubou, Mountain Oriole, Black-billed Turaco, Brown-capped Weaver, Mackinnon's Shrike, and a pair of stunning Dusky Crimsonwing that were flitting through the bushes at eye level. The forest walk was filled with breathtaking scenes, bird calls never seemed to cease, and some smaller primates such as blue monkey and guereza were encountered along the way. Further along we managed to see Dusky Tit, White-tailed Blue Flycatcher, Yellow-streaked Greenbul, and the Albertine Rift endemics Yellow-eyed Black Flycatcher and the diminutive Dwarf Honeyguide. Local knowledge told us that Grauer's Broadbill was out of the nest, and so we were now fully aware that we could lay eyes upon the bird at any moment as it feeds, much like a flycatcher, in the canopy. "I've got the bird!" was the next sentence uttered, and, sure enough, the birds were above us, two of them, feeding in the canopy. Clambering a little higher up the slope we were able to get saturating looks at this small and dumpy light-green beauty.

Grauer's Broadbill, Mubwindi Swamp, Bwindi Impenetrable Forest

We continued our walk down towards Mubwindi Swamp in search of one or two more specials. The melodic call of the Albertine Rift endemic Grauer's Warbler came from the swamp area the minute we arrived, and after a bit of looking around we eventually got some nice but slightly distant looks at this species. We also recorded African Rail, Western Citril, and Carruther's Cisticola. On the way back a noisy family of White-headed Wood Hoopoes alerted us to their presence, while Crowned Hornbill flew over silently. Additional enjoyable species on the way home included White-bellied Crested Flycatcher, fleeting views of Lagden's Bushshrike, Red-headed Malimbe, and Petit's Cuckooshrike. The last new species for the day was the stunning Bar-tailed Trogon, a single individual perched inconspicuously in the mid-stratum.

Day 8. Transfer to Buhoma, Bwindi Impenetrable National Park, birding "The Neck"

The Uganda birding tour is full of well-known African birding sites, and today we spent some of the morning birding "The Neck" of Bwindi Impenetrable National Park. A constant joke during our time in Bwindi was that the park was not living up to its name; we managed to penetrate it many times! The birding was excellent – Yellow-spotted Barbet, Grey-backed Camaroptera, Dusky-blue Flycatcher, and Pink-footed Puffback showed well, while Blue-throated Brown Sunbird required some abnormal neck contortions. Further along the beautiful forest tracks we encountered a lovely stream, which held Cassin's Flycatcher, Mountain Wagtail, and a beautiful female Crowned Eagle circling low overhead. Afternoon birding commenced shortly after a good rest at the lodge. We birded the forest edge near Buhoma village and experienced excellent birding with loads of activity; among the highlights were Many-colored and Bocage's Bushshrikes, Black-billed Weaver, Red-capped Robin-Chat, Pink-footed Puffback, Toro Olive Greenbul, Green-throated Sunbird, Black-and-white Shrike-flycatcher, Tullberg's and Buff-spotted Woodpeckers, and Yellow-throated Leaflove. Sunbirds were also plentiful around Buhoma, and we recorded Green-throated, Green-headed, Scarlet-chested, Northern Double-collared, Variable, and Collared all before sunset.

Day 9. Birding Buhoma, Bwindi Impenetrable National Park

We spent an exciting day birding the primary forest of the Buhoma area. Packed lunches, binoculars, scopes, and cameras were all packed and ready to go. Grey Apalis, Elliot's Woodpecker, and Grey-winged Robin-Chat kicked off our day nicely, while Equatorial Akalat, Black-faced Rufous Warbler, and Mountain Illadopsis really made us work for any good visuals, but we prevailed in the end. The forest was alive with birdsong, with the likes of Western Bronze-naped Pigeon, Grey-throated Barbet, Green Hylia, and White-spotted Flufftail calling almost constantly in the background. We had an interesting burst of activity before lunch with a few glimpses at some really tricky undergrowth species; these included Red-throated Alethe, Red-tailed Bristlebill, and White-tailed Ant Thrush. These species were all together and presumably following an ant swarm in order to feed. Lunch came at just the right time, even though some of us were "falling" for the great birding in Buhoma, but the short break was definitely welcome. Our afternoon session kicked off with some lovely new Greenbuls, including Red-tailed, Ansorge's, and Kakamega, the latter being a recent split from Shelley's Greenbul. Chapin's Flycatcher was another fairly uncommon Ugandan species that we connected with during our walk; its high-pitched call is incredibly distinctive once learned. Other species that we managed to find deeper in the forest reserve included Willard's Sooty Boubou, White-bellied Robin-Chat, Levaillant's Cuckoo, Green Hylia, and African Broadbill. Some of the trickier species that we tried to locate today included Kivu Ground Thrush and Neumann's Warbler, but unfortunately, try as we might, they were nowhere to be seen.

Day 10. Transfer to Queen Elizabeth National Park

After a very intriguing and successful six days in Bwindi we traveled to Queen Elizabeth National Park for some savanna birding and game viewing. Before we made our way to Queen Elizabeth, however, we enjoyed an hour in the morning birding Buhoma's forest outskirts one more time. It was great to see Grey-throated Barbet and Green-headed Sunbirds feeding up-close in a nearby flowering and fruiting tree. Western Citril and Yellow-rumped Tinkerbird were close by, and Cabanis's Greenbul was a new species for the trip list. Of course the Ishasha Sector of Queen Elizabeth NP is well known for the tree-climbing lions, and that was the first area of the park we traveled through. We managed to find two separate groups of lions in some large fig trees, just lounging around in the heat of the day. The birding started to pick up as we got closer to the Mweya Peninsula, where we would be staying for the next two nights. During the drive in and the game drive we did in the afternoon we recorded species such as Flappet Lark, Northern and Grey-backed Fiscals, Brimstone Canary, Helmeted Guineafowl, Spur-winged Lapwing, and Water Thick-knee.

Day 11. Birding Queen Elizabeth National Park

An exciting day was spent within the Queen Elizabeth National Park, with a very enjoyable general safari, on which we found all sorts of game as well as some great savanna birds. It was also a good day for terrestrial species, which included African Pipit and African Wattled, Crowned, Senegal, and Spur-winged Lapwings, as well as the small Temminck's Courser. Other species we found while on our game drive included Brown Snake Eagle, African Grey Woodpecker, Grey Kestrel, Red-billed Quelea, Yellow-billed Oxpecker (more often than not on buffalo), Buff-bellied Warbler, Grey-headed Kingfisher and White-throated and Olive Bee-eaters. The day's mammals were really enjoyable and included the likes of African buffalo, African elephant, Uganda kob, defassa waterbuck, Rothschild's giraffe, common warthog, bushbuck, and hippopotamus. The boat cruise in the afternoon on the Kazinga Channel was certainly one of the highlights of the trip. The Kazinga Channel is some 40 kilometers long and boast some special wildlife sightings. African Skimmers upstream from the lodge were a real highlight as they came cruising low over the water to roost on the bank. Some of the other avian attractions included Gull-billed Tern, Spur-winged Lapwing, and Yellow-billed and Marabou Storks; shorebirds included Curlew Sandpiper, Common Greenshank, Marsh Sandpiper, Kittlitz's and Three-banded Plovers, and Water Thick-knee. Further downstream towards Lake Edward a plethora of different species were hanging around on the banks near a local fishing village, obviously a place where they are able to pick up scraps. Hundred's of White-breasted Cormorants, Pink-backed Pelican, Marabou Stork, Grey-headed Gull, and African Sacred Ibis were the main members of the group. Wire-tailed Swallow was also a nice addition back at the main dock area after the boat trip.

Grey Kestrel, Queen Elizabeth National Park

Day 12. Queen Elizabeth National Park to Kibale National Park

Having spent some excellent birding time in the open savanna of Queen Elizabeth National Park we headed on northwards to Kibale National Park. A fairly long day's travel was needed before we reached Kibale, this together with some rough roads and road works meant that we didn't get a great deal of birding in for the day. We did manage a very enjoyable walk just outside Kibale, where we found the likes of Black-and-white Shrike-flycatcher, Grey Tit-Flycatcher, and a host of Sunbirds including Copper, Bronzy, Grey-chinned, Green-throated, Olive-bellied, and Collared. Both White-breasted and Grey-headed Nigrita were fairly 'showy' in the Kibale area and around the gardens of the lodge. We were all fairly excited about tomorrow, as it would be the day we would target the fabulous Green-breasted Pitta!

Day 13. Kibale National Park and Green-breasted Pitta

This morning we set out rather early, with a clear goal in mind, namely finding the enigmatic Green-breasted Pitta. According to expert local knowledge the earlier we entered the forest the better, as the birds tend to call and display early, which obviously makes them easier to locate. The forest was alive with song – Fire-crested Alethe and Scaly-breasted Illadopsis were the main culprits, while in the distance calls of Western Nicator, Narina Trogon, and Yellow-billed Barbet were clear. Before we were able to locate any pitta, bird song and general activity died down, and we only had visuals of Olive Sunbird. We walked some distance, and one of our local guides mentioned that he saw what he thought was the pitta moving through the undergrowth. We moved in closer, and soon enough we were all onto the bird; Green-breasted Pitta was in our binoculars' view. The excitement was exhilarating! We hung around and watched as it performed its hopping and calling display. On the walk back toward the vehicle we managed some nice sightings of White-breasted Nigrita, Red-headed Bluebill, Yellow-breasted Apalis, and White-browed Coucal on the forest edge. In another section of forest we finally managed sightings of a species that we had frustratingly only heard until this point, Honeyguide Greenbul. We also found the likes of Western Oriole, Chestnut Wattle-eye, and White-tailed Ant Thrush.

Green-breasted Pitta, Kibale National Park

There was enough time in the afternoon for some of the group to fit in chimp trekking, where fantastic sightings were enjoyed. Chimpanzees are definitely fascinating to watch and must surely be one of the most amazing mammals that one can see on a birding adventure! We also had enough time to fit in a lovely walk around the community-run Bigodi Wetlands Sanctuary. This swamp area delivered some great sightings of species such as Great Blue Turaco, Woodland Kingfisher, Double-toothed and Yellow-billed Barbets, African Blue Flycatcher, and Bronzy Sunbird. The swamp also yielded some really great primates, in particular ashy red colobus.

Day 14. Transfer to Masindi for Murchison Falls extension

Today was largely a travel day, where we transferred to Masindi for the five-day extension to Budongo Forest and Murchison Falls National Park. We did, however, manage to add some birding before we left the Kibale area. We added a couple of interesting species, including Petit's Cuckooshrike, Yellow-mantled Weaver, Long-crested Eagle, and African Black Duck on one of the streams in the northern area of Kibale. Two other additions for the day included our first visual of Brown-backed Scrub Robin, a breeding male Compact Weaver, and Blue-headed Coucal.

Day 15. Budongo Forest – birding the Royal Mile

A fantastic day awaited us, birding the famous Royal Mile in the Budongo Forest. We kicked things off with a couple of interesting species: Little Green Sunbird, Grey Longbill, Olive-green Camaroptera, Little Grey Greenbul, White-throated Greenbul, and the sought-after Ituri Batis. Forest Robin was calling nearby, but we were not able to manage any visuals of this “akalat-like” robin. Soon enough we found one of the other targets for the day, the energetic Chestnut-capped Flycatcher; small groups of four to six birds moved through the lower canopy. Other attractions near the start of the walk were a very confiding Red-chested Cuckoo, Brown-eared and Yellow-crested Woodpeckers, Blue-throated Roller, and Lemon-bellied Crombec. A delightful family of Rufous-crowned Eremomela was active in the mid-stratum, showing very well. Further on the calls of Chocolate-backed and Blue-breasted Kingfishers rang through the forest interior. The handsome-looking Chocolate-backed Kingfisher really did give us the runaround, and unfortunately only fleeting views were obtained by some of the group; Blue-breasted Kingfisher, however, gave us much better looks much to the delight (and relief) of some of us. The last period of birding the Royal Mile really did produce some enjoyable sightings; species such as Sooty Flycatcher, White-thighed Hornbill, Sabine's Spinetail, and African Shrike-flycatcher were all close by, but the star of the show certainly went to a member of the Rallidae family, White-spotted Flufftail. These notorious skulkers inhabit the darker, dense, and moist undergrowth of lowland forest and are usually found near quiet forest streams and muddy areas. We heard the call of the flufftail, which is rather tinkerbird-like, echo through the forest in a muddy area near the path. Our excellent local guide was able to whistle the call of the species so well that before we knew it the bird was out of the cover and gave excellent views.

White-spotted Flufftail, Budongo Forest, the Royal Mile

Before we headed back to Masindi for the night we stopped at some agricultural fields close to an area of the Budongo Forest's edge and found more species to add to our trip list. These included Whistling Cisticola, Black-winged Red Bishop, Black Bishop, Pin-tailed Whydah, and Black-bellied Firefinch. Two other species that were particularly good to get visuals of were Cardinal Quelea and Brown Twinspot.

Day 16. Masindi to Murchison Falls National Park

Today we traveled via the western escarpment towards Lake Albert and eventually to our accommodation just south of the Victoria Nile, Kabalega Wilderness Lodge. We first managed to fit in some birding along the Buliisa Escarpment, where our finds included Northern Red Bishop, Foxy Cisticola, Silverbird, Vinaceous Dove, Beautiful Sunbird, Black-billed Barbet, and Dark Chanting Goshawk. Once we had made the fairly short descent down towards the lake we started to see the likes of Red-throated Bee-eater, Grey-headed Kingfisher, and Red-cheeked Cordon-bleu. We enjoyed a much-deserved rest in the afternoon after a very hot and humid morning's travel and birding. The hot weather brought some much-needed rain in the afternoon, and once the rain had subsided we headed out for a walk. The birds were singing and very active; we recorded Brown Babbler, Spotted Palm Thrush, Moustached Grass Warbler, Short-winged Cisticola, Wire-tailed Swallow, Grey-backed Fiscal, and Mourning Collared Dove. The banks of the Nile River were visible from the lodge, and we recorded various waterfowl, egrets, herons, and cormorants, in particular Saddle-billed Stork, Grey Crowned Crane, Purple Heron, Great and Little Egrets, Reed and White-breasted Cormorants, White-winged Tern, and African Darter.

Day 17. Birding Murchison Falls National Park

An early start was necessary in order for us to catch the early ferry across the Nile to get to the northern parts of Murchison for our much anticipated safari trip. We were rewarded for being up early with a couple of Long-tailed Nightjars sitting on the road as we drove out of the lodge area. The ferry across the river allows for some time birding the river itself; birds we recorded here were Black Saw-wing, Malachite Kingfisher, Goliath Heron, Spur-winged Lapwing, Red-throated Bee-eater, and African Grey Hornbill. As we traveled deeper into the park we started to see the true beauty of Murchison Falls National Park: lush, green, open savanna with scattered trees and lala palms. Black-billed Wood Dove, Speckle-fronted Weaver, Pale Flycatcher, and Black-bellied Bustard became the first new species that we added to our trip list, and there were surely many more to come. The interesting and enigmatic Abyssinian Ground Hornbill was definitely one of the bigger targets for the day – eyes were peeled! A pair of Red-necked Falcon were great to see cruising over the grassland, perching far in a bare tree – luckily we did get another individual much closer to the road later. Piapiacs were fairly abundant as they followed some larger game around in order to feed on any insects flushed up by the game. The day seemed to get better and better; we just kept on adding species after species: Swallow-tailed Bee-eater and the breathtaking Northern Carmine Bee-eater blew us away. It was also amazing to see Shoebill for the second time on the trip – we checked out the delta area of the Nile within the park, and, sure enough, a Shoebill was perched on some vegetation in the distance. We also recorded the likes of Black-headed Lapwing, Spotted Thick-knee, Collared Pratincole, Striated Heron, and Martial Eagle. Later that afternoon we finally managed to pick up a family group of Abyssinian Ground Hornbill that were actually perched in the open branches of a large acacia tree. A plethora of mammals here were also enjoyable; both oribi and patas monkey were in evidence and new to our mammal list.

Northern Carmine Bee-eater, Murchison Falls National Park

Murchison Falls itself is about seven kilometers upstream from the ferry, so the afternoon was spent taking a boat cruise up to see the falls. Birding and some game viewing were both enjoyed from the boat – species that caught our attention were Goliath Heron, Intermediate Egret, and Red-throated Bee-eater, and, of course, almost inevitably there was a beautiful pair of Rock Pratincole far upstream near the falls.

Day 18. Murchison Falls, transfer back to Entebbe

Our birding adventure had just about come to an end, day eighteen was a day of travel back to Entebbe in order to rest up for our flights back home. We did, however, manage to find a species or two that had eluded us until this point. We enjoyed a few more Black-headed Lapwings and also added Black-rumped Waxbill and Chestnut-crowned Sparrow-Weaver to our list on our drive out of Murchison Falls.
